The McCormick Fad.

Mrs. Cyrus McCormick and her daughter, Mrs. Emmons Blaine, have been the means of effecting a reform in taxaious attention in other cities. The Mc- City: Cormick's returned to the assessors a full statement of personal property owned by them, mainly in stocks and bonds. Their action was eneered at as the "McCormick fad," but it produced remarkable results. Mr. Marshail Field, another Chicago millionaire, voluntarily | 8:12 a. m. every day made return of $250,000 worth of person-1 alty, though he had been assessed the previous year at only $21,000. Then the board of review of assessments, which corresponds to our board of equalization, raised his assessment to $600,000. Other assessments were raised, until the total personalty valuation for the South side grew from $70,000,000 to $195,000,-000. The West side was raised from $2,000,000 to $10,000,000. These raises are, of course, not final, and will undoubtedly be fought to the court of last

If the rich of Chicago or any other city should suddenly take a notion to Clark O. Proud. follow the McCormick lead and strive among themselves for the honor of having the highest assessment, there would be a revolution in the finances of that city. In proportion as the wealthy voluntarily assumed their just share of taxation, the poor and the middle class es would be relieved of much of the incubus that they bear. Real estate would be more lightly burdened and would consequently rise in value and the revival of that branch of business would be bustened.

The rich have heretofore found cheaper ways to deeplay their wealth than by paying taxes on a heavy assessment There is no pleasurable excitement in paying thousands of dollars to the county treasurer, which could be invested in blooded horses, fast yachts, trips to Europe and in many other agreeable ways. The McCormick fad, if it should be ome general, would be a consummation to be wished, but not hoped for. There is nothing permanent about it.
